

Katharina, MD, PhD, is specialised in internal medicine and general practice and works in primary care in Stockholm, Sweden. She has the medical responsibility for 110 frail older home care patients.

Katharina recently defended her thesis "Every coin has two sides - The challenge of addressing inappropriate prescribing in older patients in primary care". Her research interests include the development of person-centred care models for home care patients.